

Peers to Peace

PROJECT OUTCOMES THROUGH THE EYES OF PARTICIPANTS

Co-funded by the Erasmus+ Programme of the European Union

Knowledge about financial sustainability and project qualities

"Through this (project management) seminar I can see the whole perspective of project management and understand more about impact and visibility of our project."

Knowledge transfer

"The discussion and the way to transfer knowledge was done really well, so I can understand much better. Thus, I am more confident to bring it back home and share about project management and volunteer management when we have seminar in our branch in the future."

Project management and fundraising

"All the topics were really relevant for me and for my branch as well. I got a lot of idea about how to recruit and engage more volunteers. I am also happy to had a chance to learn more about fundraising and got a lot of useful information about the donors, how to make pitch and fundraising method."

Exchanging practices of volunteer management

"I found enriching the fact of comparing what we do in my organization with other branches. I got to learn about this database of volunteers that some branches are using and I think we'll adopt it in my organization too."

Motivation to implement new project ideas

"Now I am approaching new partners, a refugee association in Jakarta to propose a workcamp together in refugee and global peace education in Jakarta."

"We're about to make our new project this year. I'm going to implement what I got from the Project Management Seminar. This will be the 1st time for us. Wish us luck!"

Enforced new international cooperations

Examples:

Possible future cooperation on a world-wide Peace Run in 2020 (based on best practice from SCI Malaysia), training for volunteers in SCI Sri Lanka, new volunteer camp in Australia, and much, much more.

Gendered Realities aims to combat gender stereotypes and discrimination in SCI activities through awareness raising by a larger gender campaign.

The final project report for Peers to Peace was submitted in November 2018
